

APPLICATION REVIEW AND SELECTION COMMITTEE

Patrick Thaddeus Jackson, American University

Julie Novkov, State University of New York at Albany

Frederic Charles Schaffer, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Peregrine Schwartz-Shea, University of Utah

Dvora Yanow, Vrije Universiteit, Amsterdam

Patrick Thaddeus Jackson is Associate Professor of International Relations in the School of International Service at the American University in Washington, DC; he is also Director of General Education for the university. He previously taught at Columbia University and New York University. In 2003-2004, he served as President of the International Studies Association-Northeast and is the present Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of International Relations and Development. Jackson's research interests include culture and agency, international relations theory (particularly the intersection of realism and constructivism), sociological methodology, the role of rhetoric in public life, the concept of 'Western Civilization,' and the political and social theory of Max Weber. He teaches courses on IR theory, political philosophy, research methodology, the philosophy of social science, and the intersection of popular culture and international politics. He has three times received university awards for the innovative use of technology in the classroom and was the AU Honors Program's Faculty Member of the Year for 2004-5. He is presently writing a book on the philosophy of science and its implications for IR scholarship.

ptjack@american.edu

Julie Novkov is Associate Professor of Political Science and Women's Studies at the University at Albany, SUNY. She is the author of Racial Union: Law, Intimacy, and the White State in Alabama, 1865-1954 (University of Michigan Press 2008) and Constituting Workers, Protecting Women: Gender, Law, and Labor in the Progressive Era and New Deal Years (University of Michigan Press 2001), as well as articles and book chapters concerning the legal construction of subordinated identity and constitutional development in the United States. She co-edited Race and American Political Development with Joseph Lowndes and Dorian Warren (Routledge 2008) and Security Disarmed: Critical Perspectives on Race, Gender, and Militarization with Barbara Sutton and Sandra Morgen (Rutgers University Press 2008). Her current research explores the uses of legal archaeology as an interpretive method.

jnovkov@albany.edu

Frederic Charles Schaffer teaches political science at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. His area of specialization is comparative politics with a geographic focus on Southeast Asia and Sub-Saharan Africa. Substantively, he studies the meaning and practice of democracy across cultures using the tools of ordinary language philosophy and other language-based interpretive methods. He contributed a chapter on ordinary language interviewing in Yanow and Schwartz-Shea's Interpretation and Method: Empirical Research Methods and the Interpretive Turn (M E Sharpe, 2006). He is also the author of Democracy in Translation: Understanding Politics in an Unfamiliar Culture (Cornell University Press, 1998) and The Hidden Costs of Clean Election Reform (Cornell University Press, 2008). He is, in addition, the editor of Elections for Sale: The Causes and Consequences of Vote Buying (Lynne Rienner Publishers, 2007).

schaffer@polsci.umass.edu

Peregrine Schwartz-Shea is Professor of Political Science at the University of Utah. Her research on doctoral curricula in methodology has appeared in PS: Political Science and Politics and Perestroika! The raucous rebellion in political science (ed. Kristen Renwick Monroe). She is co-editor with Dvora Yanow of Interpretation and method: Empirical research methods and the interpretive turn (M E Sharpe, 2006); her chapter contribution in that book, and a continuing research interest, is the appropriate criteria for evaluation of interpretive work and its reception in the discipline of political science. Current research projects with Yanow include institutional review board policy and interpretive research design. With other co-authors she is researching pedagogical aspects of student response systems and the use of animated dynamic models in organizational contexts.

psshea@poli-sci.utah.edu

Dvora Yanow holds the Strategic Chair in Meaning and Method in the Faculty of Social Sciences, Vrije Universiteit (Amsterdam, The Netherlands). Her research has been shaped by an overall interest in the communication of meaning in policy and organizational settings. She is the author of How does a policy mean? Interpreting policy and organizational actions; Conducting interpretive policy analysis; and Constructing race and ethnicity in America: Category-making in public policy and administration (winner of the 2004 ASPA and 2007 Herbert A. Simon-APSA book awards) and co-editor of Knowing in organizations: A practice-based approach; Interpretation and method: Empirical research methods and the interpretive turn; and Organizational ethnography: Studying the complexities of everyday life. Current research focuses on Dutch race-ethnic category-making, policy frames and framing, reflective practice, museums and the idea of "science," and, with Peregrine Schwartz-Shea, US Institutional Review Board policies and practices.

www.fsw.vu.nl/yanow; d.yanow@fsw.vu.nl

This workshop is made possible through the generous support of the National Science Foundation and the University of Utah (US), University of Toronto (Canada), and Vrije Universiteit (Amsterdam, The Netherlands).